II. Compare Jacksonville's programs to peer cities and Florida CRAs to identify best practices and improve efficiency and impact.

III. Analyze real estate market conditions and trends to evaluate market maturity and identify submarkets or product types where incentives could be reduced, phased out, or re-targeted.

IV. Develop a framework for predictable, programmatic incentives that could be applied "by right" to certain project types meeting defined public objectives.

V. Recommend criteria, metrics, and procedures for project and program evaluation.

VI. Provide long-term framework to anticipate fiscal impact and recommend triggers for scaling back public participation as the market strengthens.

IV. Conduct “but-for” and gap analyses to confirm the necessity of a subsidy.

   a. Assess market dynamics, review appraisals, market studies, and other third-party reports, to incorporate relevant information into reports and presentations as part of the approval process.

   b. Estimate property tax and other financial benefits to the City following the City’s Public Investment Policy, the DIA BID Plan, program guidelines, and established protocols in order to objectively determine the City’s return on investment from incentives and the development activity proposed.

I. Assess current incentive programs (REV, Historic Rehabilitation Programs, Retail Enhancement Programs, Completion Grants, etc.) for effectiveness, efficiency, and consistency with market needs.

II. Compare Jacksonville's programs to peer cities and Florida CRAs to identify best practices and improve efficiency and impact.

III. Analyze real estate market conditions and trends to evaluate market maturity and identify submarkets or product types where incentives could be reduced, phased out, or re-targeted.

IV. Develop a framework for predictable, programmatic incentives that could be applied "by right" to certain project types meeting defined public objectives.

V. Recommend criteria, metrics, and procedures for project and program evaluation.

VI. Provide long-term framework to anticipate fiscal impact and recommend triggers for scaling back public participation as the market strengthens.

VII. Summarize findings in a written Incentive Policy Report with actionable recommendations for DIA Board consideration.
