

RITZ THEATRE AND MUSEUM PRESENTS

MORE THAN A GAME

AFRICAN AMERICAN SPORTS IN JACKSONVILLE 1900-1975

During the era of segregation, Jacksonville's black community developed high school sports programs with far-reaching impact. Challenged and nurtured by their coaches and supported by the community, Jacksonville athletes not only went on to fill the ranks of college and professional teams, but also became leaders in the fields of education, civic service, business, and countless other professions. This proud heritage and the spirit of conquering adversity must never be forgotten.

Exhibit Opens July 1, 2011
